Table of Contents:

I. Introduction

This handbook is intended to provide information about the policies and practices of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences and the Graduate School of the Camden campus of Rutgers University. It is intended to supplement, but not to replace, the 1988-1990 Handbook for Faculty published by the University. Further information about university-wide policies can be found in the University Regulations and Procedures. Information about current university and FAS policies can be obtained from the Dean's office. Further information on sabbaticals and FASIP can be found in the current contract.

II. History and Mission

Rutgers-Camden is one of the three campuses of Rutgers, the State University of New Jersey, which was founded in 1766. This campus dates from the 1920s, when a group of interested citizens established the South Jersey Law School and the College of South Jersey. Those entities became part of the Rutgers system in 1950.

The 1995 University Strategic Plan envisions Rutgers Camden as a comprehensive campus with a broad range of undergraduate and graduate educational opportunities for a diverse and expanding group of students. Undergraduate programs of high quality, post-baccalaureate programs, distinguished graduate and professional education for Southern New Jersey and the region, and the creation of Research Centers and Service Initiatives focused on the campus's areas of expertise are at the core of the vision for this campus.

The overarching mission of the units that comprise the Faculty of Arts and Sciences is both to be and be recognized as the premier public institution of higher learning in the region for undergraduate and Master's level education. Within that broad mission, each academic unit has a distinct purpose and set of goals.

- The College of Arts and Sciences provides excellent undergraduate liberal arts, professional, and pre-professional education; focuses on the value of a liberal arts education as preparation for lifelong learning; prepares students for graduate study and for the changing workplace of the twenty-first century; and provides opportunities in research guided by faculty members.

- The Graduate School provides outstanding programs to meet the intellectual and professional needs of people throughout the Delaware Valley and Southern New Jersey region and offers nationally recognized graduate programs. The Graduate School hopes to expand over the next decade by developing additional Master’s programs and adding selected Ph.D. programs. It also seeks to increase collaborations with other institutions in the region.

- University College offers undergraduate programs of study, both on and off-campus, to adult part-time students whose responsibilities do not allow for full-time study during the day. Over the next decade, we expect to transform University College to meet the changing needs of adult learners.

III. Structure

The three Arts and Sciences divisions of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences – the College of Arts and Sciences, University College, and the Graduate School – together constitute the largest and most diverse academic units at the Camden Campus. The College of Arts and Sciences educates full-time undergraduate students in twenty-five majors; University College offers seven majors to part-time adult learners taking evening courses; and the Graduate School has eight programs for post-baccalaureate students earning Master’s Degrees.

The campus is also home to the Law School and the School of Business. Provost Roger J. Dennis presides over the entire campus, while a dean leads each major academic division. Margaret Marsh directs the Faculty of Arts and Sciences, University College, and the Graduate School, while Rayman Solomon heads the Law School and Milton Leontiades guides the School of Business.

In the College of Arts and Sciences, Dean Margaret Marsh is joined by Associate Dean Daniel Hart, who is responsible for the twenty departments that grant undergraduate degrees as well as for oversight of research centers and institutes; Associate Dean Marie Cornelia, who guides the programs of the Graduate School; Associate Dean Christopher Dougherty, who directs the Educational Opportunity Fund Program and oversees University College; and Associate Dean Nancy Rosoff who is charged with providing administrative support for academic programs within the Faculty of Arts and Sciences and staff support for the Dean of FAS-C.

IV. Faculty Governance

The bylaws pertaining to the College of Arts and Sciences and the Graduate School are summarized below. The text of the bylaws appears in the appendix. The bylaws describe the membership, duties, and responsibilities of the undergraduate and graduate faculty as well as associated committees.
A. Bylaws of the Arts and Sciences Faculty

Section I: The Faculty

The Arts and Sciences Faculty includes the Professors, Associate Professors, Assistant Professors, and Instructors who have served at least one year as well as the President and Executive Vice-President for Academic Affairs of the University, the Camden Provost, and the Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences. The Arts and Sciences Faculty also includes professional librarians of equivalent rank.

The Arts and Sciences Faculty has jurisdiction over academic matters for the undergraduate colleges in Camden, subject to review by the University Senate.

Among the duties and powers of the Arts and Sciences Faculty are: determining specific requirements for admission into the various curricula, establishing the requisite curricula for academic work, encouraging the research work of faculty members and advanced students, fixing specific requirements for degrees, and recommending for degrees those candidates who have fulfilled such requirements.

Section II: The Faculty Senate

The Faculty Senate consists of between thirty and sixty members, drawn from qualified full-time faculty and librarians. Representation of various constituencies is specified in the bylaws. Each Faculty Senator serves for a two-year term and may not serve more than two consecutive terms.

The Faculty Senate acts on matters within the jurisdiction of the Arts and Sciences Faculty and as an advisory body to the Deans. Its officers include an elected President and Vice-President, a Secretary (who is also the Arts and Sciences Faculty Secretary), and a Parliamentarian. Eight student representatives participate in the discussions of the Faculty Senate, but do not have a vote.

Section III: Committees and Their Duties

There are eleven standing committees—a brief description of each follows. All committees serve both the Colleges of Arts and Sciences and University College. For the complete list of duties, membership, and other information, see the Appendix. All committees report to the Faculty Senate.

Among the duties of the Academic Policy and Courses of Study Committee are: overseeing college-wide curricular requirements and academic standards, reviewing and recommending new curricula, studying recommendations for course changes proposed by faculty members, consulting with appropriate administrative officers about the effect of course changes on administrative procedure, and reporting to the Faculty Senate for its approval all course changes recommended by the committee.
The duties of the Admission and Retention Committee include:
establishing and reviewing criteria for admission, reviewing candidates for admission, monitoring retention rates, and developing programs to improve recruiting and retention.

The Appointments and Promotions Committee bears responsibility for advising the Dean about appointments, reappointments, promotion, and personnel matters. Members of this committee also serve as a pool from which the Dean may select members for all Advisory Committees on Appointments and Promotions.

Members of the Honors Program Committee review applications of candidates for the program, establish guidelines for seminar proposals and select seminars to be offered by faculty, and administer and evaluate the program.

The Information Services Committee represents faculty interests and concerns in matters involving library collections and services, A-V equipment and services, and computer equipment and services.

Members of the Planning and Budget Committee propose long-range plans, such as new program development; consider the relationship of Arts and Sciences to other units of the University, other area colleges, and the community; and advise the Dean on academic and budget priorities.

The Review Committee has advisory powers only. Its duties include counseling and advising any member of the legislative body who seeks such advice with respect to any problem affecting his or her status as a member of the University.

Among the duties of the Rules and Procedures Committee are:
conducting elections, resolving procedural questions under the By-Laws, formulating the rules under which the business of the faculty may be conducted, and revising and amending existing rules.

The duties of the Scholastic Standing Committee include: interpreting and executing the rules and Regulations of CAS with regard to individual cases involving scholastic standing, approving deviations from the published policy on course load and repeat option, approving re-admission of students, and proposing new scholastic regulations to the Senate.

The responsibilities of the Student Life Committee include:
recommending procedures for improving relations between students and faculty, reviewing regulations governing student conduct, investigating matters regarding student dishonesty, attempting to resolve conditions causing student frustration or discontent, and working with the Teaching Excellence Center on matters relating to teacher evaluation.

Among the duties of the Faculty Life Committee are regularly consulting with the Dean and Provost on matters involving campus security, receiving grievances and suggestions from faculty regarding parking matters, and overseeing the periodic evaluation of college administrators.
B. Bylaws for the Graduate Faculty

The Graduate Faculty includes full-time faculty members at Rutgers University--Camden who are involved with a Graduate Program administered under the authority of the Graduate School--Camden. The Camden Provost, the Dean and Associate Dean of the Graduate School, the Librarian of the Camden College of Arts and Sciences, and the Deans of the Camden College of Arts and Sciences, Law School, and Business School are ex officio members of the Graduate Faculty.

The Graduate Faculty has jurisdiction over academic matters, and prescribes requirements for admission, curricula, and graduation. Officers of the Graduate Faculty include the Dean and Associate Dean of the Graduate School and an Executive council comprised of Program Directors of those Graduate Programs offered by the Graduate School in Camden.

V. Policies

A. Class Absence

Faculty members are expected to meet with their classes at all of the scheduled time periods. If a faculty member is ill and must be absent from class, the faculty member must contact the department chairperson so that coverage of the class can be arranged.

The College is committed to the professional development of its faculty and recognizes that attendance at conferences, performances at public events, and so on are essential components of professional development. Occasionally, important professional development opportunities conflict with teaching responsibilities. To allow for professional development in such situations, faculty members may make alternative arrangements for up to one half of one week's classes each semester (for example, for classes on a Tuesday/Thursday meeting pattern, alternative arrangements could be made for the classes meeting on a Thursday). These alternative arrangements might include coverage by a colleague or guest speaker, a laboratory assignment monitored by a laboratory assistant, re-scheduling the class, and so on. The chairperson must approve of the arrangements and be notified of the professional development reasons for them.

Ordinarily faculty members should not miss more than one half of one week's classes in the course of a semester. However, when extraordinary professional development opportunities are available, a faculty member may discuss with the department chairperson the possibility of making alternative arrangements for longer absences from class. If the chairperson judges both that the professional development opportunity is extraordinary and that the alternative arrangements provide for high quality education for students, the chairperson may approve a faculty member's request to be absent from classes for longer periods. All costs associated with the alternative arrangements (e.g., hiring a guest lecturer) are to be borne by the faculty member.
Except in instances of illness or professional development opportunities (as outlined above), faculty members are expected to meet with their scheduled classes. A faculty member who believes that he/she cannot meet with regularly scheduled classes for reasons other than these should seek approval from the department chairperson for both absence from class and the alternative arrangements for coverage of the missed classes.

Because teaching responsibilities and professional development opportunities vary by discipline, individual departments may request amendments to these guidelines for their faculty members by submitting the proposed amendments to the Dean.

B. Computing

The University expects all members of the community to use computing and information technology resources in a responsible manner, following University policies and standards. It is especially important to adhere to software licensing and installation guidelines. Faculty and departments planning to purchase equipment or software that they expect to have supported by the Computing Manager should consult with him/her before such acquisitions are made.

Rutgers University Computing Services (RUCS) establishes standards and guidelines for computer usage. The RUCS home page contains information on basic services provided at the University as well as computing policies. Specific information and announcements about computing services at the Camden Campus can be found on the RUCS-Camden home page.

C. Faculty Academic Service Increment Program (FASIP)

Academic service increments may be awarded to faculty members who have demonstrated recent and continuing excellence in teaching, scholarship, and/or service. In addition, such increments may be awarded to faculty members whose current compensation warrants special consideration on the basis of academic or professional contributions in comparison with compensation of colleagues with similar achievements in the department or discipline at large.

In order to be eligible for academic service increments, a faculty member must meet all of the following requirements: have an appointment at Rutgers at the time of consideration for an academic service increment and during the year for which the award is made, have completed at least one year of full-time service at the University at the time of consideration for an academic service increment or at least three years of part-time service, and not be in his or her terminal year at Rutgers during the effective date of the award.

The tenured faculty of each department, to ensure equitable treatment for its members, must formulate a statement of their own specific criteria and the application of them within the framework of general criteria set by university policy. This statement must be distributed to the department prior to the commencement of the process for consideration of academic service award increments.
Please note that it is the policy of the College of Arts and Sciences and the Graduate School to use FASIP awards to acknowledge excellence in teaching and service as well as in research, scholarship, and artistic achievement. The inclusion of peer reviews will help to strengthen a recommendation for a FASIP increase based on excellence in teaching.

For further information, see the AAUP web site.

D. Faculty Responsibilities

Faculty responsibilities include teaching evaluations, academic advising, the faculty-administration survey, and responding to periodic communications from administrative offices. The College takes teaching evaluations seriously, and each faculty member is expected to participate in the student evaluation of teaching process. Academic advising is an essential faculty responsibility; faculty should be available to meet with departmental majors and other students during regularly scheduled office hours, and especially during the pre-registration periods in the fall and spring. It is important to respond to the annual survey, so that faculty activities can be properly reported each year. Communications from administrative offices solicit information vital to planning programs, budgets, and other matters; a timely response is expected.

E. Grade Complaints

According to the Camden Undergraduate Catalog, the "classroom, studio, or laboratory instructor has the responsibility for the assignment of grades. Complaints about a grade must be directed to the instructor in writing, within ten working days of its assignment. Disputes unresolved at this level are referred, in writing, to the appropriate department chairperson. Complaints remaining unresolved at this level should be directed, in writing, to the dean of the appropriate college."

F. Final Examinations

If a final exam is given in a course, it must be given in the scheduled exam period, which is published in the class and hour schedule each semester. It may not be given during the last week of class or during the reading period.

G. Grant-Funded Released Time

The following policy applies to released time from teaching funded by grants:

The grant itself should fund the released time. The released time per three-credit course shall be calculated at 12.5% of the faculty member's salary, plus benefits, which currently are set at 32.5% of salary. This percentage covers 1/8 of the faculty member's time and is based on the standard Rutgers formula in which eight three-credit courses (24 "instructional units") make up one faculty line. Ordinarily faculty shall apply for only one course of released time in any academic year.
extraordinary circumstances, the dean may approve release for more than one course, or may allow the use of part of the 12.5% per course figure as matching funds.

All proposed course release should be approved in advance of the faculty member's submission of an application. A faculty member shall first discuss the proposal with her/his chair. In making the decision to approve or reject a request for grant-funded released time from teaching, the dean shall consult with the chair.

This policy applies to all grant-funded released time, whether the grant is internal or external to the university.

Faculty should allow enough time for the approval process. Ordinarily ten working days before the submission deadline will be sufficient.

H. Inclement Weather

It is the general policy of the University not to cancel regularly scheduled classes because of weather conditions. In most cases, therefore, of emergencies which disrupt local transportation facilities or create personal problems, students and faculty members should make decisions as to attendance which appear appropriate to them in their particular circumstances.

However, there are instances where especially adverse and hazardous road conditions make it impossible to travel and to conduct academic activities at the campus. On these infrequent occasions appropriate announcements will be made over KYW (1060 AM), an area radio station. The following code numbers will identify the campus:

605 - Day Session classes (8:00 a.m. - 6:00 p.m.) -- CCAS, Graduate, Law, SBC

2605 - Evening Session classes (6:00 p.m. - 10:30 p.m.) -- UC, Graduate, Law, SBC

I. Policy Prohibiting Harassment

All members of the university community should be aware of the current policy that prohibits harassment based on an individual's race, religion, color, national origin, ancestry, sex, sexual orientation, disability, marital or veteran status. Faculty members should acquaint themselves with appropriate procedures for the referral and assistance of a student or employee concerned about harassment. The policy and complaint process can be found on the web page of the Office of University Harassment Compliance. The Office can also be contacted by phone at 732-445-3020 (x626).

J. Research Policies

According to University policy, all research involving the collection of information, data, or samples from or about human subjects or information, data, samples gathered from people at some prior time either by the researchers themselves or someone else, must be reviewed and approved prior to such studies being undertaken. This policy applies to any work whether new, ongoing, or proposed for funding, whether conducted at the University or elsewhere, by anyone affiliated with Rutgers.

The Institutional Review Board for the Protection of Human Subjects is the body at Rutgers charged with reviewing all projects using human subjects. All faculty, staff, students and others anticipating conducting research projects involving human subjects must be in compliance with University policies and procedures regarding human subjects. Further information can be obtained from the Assistant Director, Research Subjects Administration (732-445-2799).

K. Sabbatical Program

The sabbatical program now provides assistant professors with increased opportunities to pursue research and scholarship during the probationary period; under the terms of the current contract, tenure track assistant professors are eligible for a one-semester, 100% leave after six semesters. All other sabbaticals, whether one or two semesters shall be at 80% salary, except that a one-semester sabbatical at 85% shall become available after 16 semesters. However, those who are or become eligible (on or before June 30, 2003) for the 100% salary option under the pre-existing 12-semester eligibility rule shall continue to be eligible for one 100% salary, one-semester sabbatical until such time as it is taken. For further information, see the AAUP web site.

L. Tenure and Promotions

Faculty members should discuss procedures and deadlines with their department chair, who, in consultation with the appropriate members of their departments, are normally responsible for initiating recommendations for faculty reappointments and promotions.

Further information, guidance, and appropriate forms may be found at the Academic Reappointment and Promotions section of the University's Faculty & Staff web page.

M. Travel

According to the University's travel web site, "Travelers are permitted to make travel arrangements wherever they choose and are encouraged to make the purchase directly from the airline or rail website as a cost containment strategy. Upon your return from the business trip, process a TABER for reimbursement of travel-related expenses. Travelers also have the option to purchase air and rail tickets utilizing the direct billing option through any of the preferred travel agencies. The cost of the ticket is charged to the University using the direct billing option but the travel agency will charge a per transaction service fee."

Faculty who travel abroad for research or other university business may obtain a card that enables them to receive emergency medical assistance through the Global Programs office. To acquire the card, faculty should contact the Global Programs office at 732-932-6693.

N. Workload

Rutgers University is an institution committed to research and creative achievement; instruction at the undergraduate, graduate, and professional level; and service. The professional duties of faculty members, including research, teaching, and service, constitute their workload. Teaching duties are to be consistent with the missions of the departments and the larger academic units, and workload policies are to be consistent with the practice of the academic unit. The Dean, as the chief academic officer of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences and the Graduate School, is responsible for ensuring that the professional duties required of the faculty shall be in accordance with the mission of the university.

VI. Research Centers, Institutes, and Programs

A. Center for Children and Childhood Studies

The Center for Children and Childhood Studies promotes understanding, enrichment, and recognition of the significance of the experiences of childhood through support of intellectual inquiry into the lives of children in the United States and abroad; development and evaluation of service and outreach programs for children; dissemination of knowledge to those directly responsible for ministering to children’s needs and formulating policies affecting their lives and futures; and development of innovative and interdisciplinary coursework, research, and service internships that equip university students and the public to make informed decisions concerning children and youth.

F. Summer Session and Winterim

Undergraduate and graduate day and evening classes are offered during the summer in five separate sessions (three four-week sessions and two six-week sessions). Concurrently with summer session classes, the campus hosts the Rutgers-Camden Summer Music Festival and the Writers' Conference.

Winterim classes use a compact schedule, meeting in the first two weeks of January. Students meet for an orientation before the winter break and then engage in a series of directed readings and/or Internet activities before classes begin.

Faculty wishing to teach either Summer Session or Winterim classes should notify their department chair. Further information about both programs may be obtained from the Summer Session and Winterim web sites.

G. International Studies

The International Studies program, since its inception in 1985, has helped more than 1400 students from Rutgers and other institutions travel and study in more than thirty countries. By supplementing on-campus courses with short periods of study abroad, students gain a better world perspective and first-hand knowledge of subject matter. In addition to traveling to museums, libraries, and historical and cultural sites, all programs of study include pre and post-trip lectures, assigned readings, orientation seminars, and appropriate research papers and/or exams to be competed upon return. Rutgers students may participate in the Program on a credit basis only.

X. Updates
Information for retired faculty (and those considering retirement):

Many benefits are available to retirees. These include auditing courses at no cost, a guest computer account, a new ID card for use at University libraries, counseling services, free parking permits, and eligibility to join the Rutgers Retired Faculty Association (RFA). Membership in the RFA brings additional benefits that are listed at their web site. In addition, retirees should consider joining the campus retired faculty organization.

The Dean’s Office of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences hopes to maintain a mutually satisfying and beneficial relationship with its retirees. Retirees are welcome at various campus events, including luncheons held twice yearly for retired faculty and staff. Retired faculty members are especially encouraged to attend Honors Convocation and Commencement. Those attending Commencement may process with the faculty: the Dean’s Office will pay for the rental of cap and gown, provided appropriate deadlines are met.

In addition, we hope that retirees will remain active in campus life. Campus involvement can include continuing a research program, advising students, career counseling, fund-raising, directing independent study projects, committee work, administrative consultations, and other activities. In exchange for at least 20 hours per semester of such service (to be arranged with department chairs), the campus will provide the appropriate support, including shared office space, telephone access, reasonable secretarial assistance, and necessary office supplies.
